As thrilling almost as if the principals had been set upon the stage and the drama of treason played before the lights, the lecture of William Webster Ellsworth, president of the Century Publishing Company, on "Arnold and Andre," last night pleased and enthralled a large audience in the John Marshall High School.

The lecture was given under the auspices of the Woman's Club, and the auditorium of the high school was well filled with members of the club and others, who had been drawn thither by the subject of the lecture and the lecturer himself.

Mr. Ellsworth was presented to the audience by Wyndham B. Merriweather, who referred to the incident in the Revolutionary War in which Arnold and Andre planned one of the most thrilling and tragic episodes immortalized by the treason of the oak and the dramatic self-sacrifice of the hawthorn. He introduced Mr. Ellsworth as one who was intimately acquainted with his subject, and as one who could interpret sympathetically the incidents which led Andre to a dignified death on the gibbet and Arnold to an ignominious end in an alien land.

Physician Gives Recipe for Gray Hair

A Well-Known Physician and Author Gives Simple Home Recipe That Will Darken Gray Hair.

In Stanton Burroughs, the well-known physician and author, recently made the following statement: "Gray hair can be easily darkened by the following simple recipe, which you can mix at home: To 7 oz. of water add a small box of Barbo Compound, 1 oz. bay rum and 1 oz. glycerine. Apply this to the hair every day until the desired shade is obtained. It is not only an excellent hair darkener, but at the same time removes dandruff and other ills of the scalp. I use it myself, and have no hesitancy in recommending it to my patients. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost."—Advertisement.

Mr. Ellsworth portrayed most clearly Arnold's characteristics of selfish ambition, which led him into treason, and Andre's fine spirit of dignity and loyalty in his last hours.

The lecturer reviewed the incidents which led up to Arnold's offer to betray his country to General Clinton, and of Andre's selection by General Clinton as the messenger between him and the traitor. Traitor and soldier met, and the plans for the betrayal—the subject of the lecture and the lecturer himself.

Arnold, fearing capture by his own army, hastened to the Vulture, lying in the Hudson River, leaving his wife and child. Andre was tried and convicted as a spy, and according to martial law, was condemned to die on the gallows. He pleaded in vain, not that he might live, but that he might die the death of a soldier, and, in spite of a letter from General Clinton to Washington, he went to his death on the gibbet.

He smiled upon those he knew as he came out of the house, which had been his prison, and with his own hands prepared the last details.

Lived As a Soldier.

Through the form was not granted to him, he nevertheless avowed that General Clinton had refused the tentitive offer of Washington to exchange Arnold for Andre, and Arnold, placed in command of British troops, spread devastation on the land which had given him birth, and heaped vituperation on the man whose confidence he had obtained and then betrayed. Afterwards he went to England, an unwelcome guest in an alien land, hated by the people of his native birth and unloved by those whose cause he had treacherously espoused.

The story was dramatically told. Mr. Ellsworth said that though Washington had often been censured for placing Andre on the gallows, instead of according him a soldier's death, there was nothing else for him to do under the circumstances, and that he had been upheld by the noted English historian, Lecky.

Overwhelmed by Ambition.

The contrast between the two men added greatly to the dramatic interest of the narrative. Arnold had been one of the greatest of the American generals, and had been one of Washington's chief confidants. But he was overwhelmed by his ambition and pride, and became traitor to his cause. Major Andre was a man in whom the virtues seemed to be superlative, man of gifts and imagination, loyalty and nobility, pure and true soldier of whom his country has always been proud.

Today Andre's dust is honored and his bones rest in England. As for Arnold, even his name is striken from the rolls of the dead. He is, indeed, unwept, unhonored and unsung.

Mr. Ellsworth told the famous story well, and the audience listened in rapt attention. Appreciation was expressed in silence during the lecture and by applause when it was ended.

TREHY ISSUES GENERAL DENIAL

In Statement Eight Pages Long, Challenges Peatross to Show Evidence of Fraud.

HANCKEL REFUSES TO ACT

Notifies Governor That He Will Not Preside—Thinks His Position Improper.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Norfolk, Va., November 22.—James V. Trehy, whose election as clerk of the Corporation Court is being contested by R. W. Peatross, through his counsel, to-day made answer to the charges filed by the contestants last Friday, Trehy makes a sweeping denial of all charges. The statement is issued by Robert B. Tunstall, Walter H. Trechler and E. Randolph Hicks, and reads both for Mr. Trehy and R. G. Gray Tunstall, whose election as city treasurer is also contested.

The statement contains eight typewritten pages, and each charge is taken up in detail.

At the outset, the respondent calls the attention of the court to the fact that "the complainants do not know who the agents were, and actually named as a clerk a man who did not act as such, and was never in the voting booth."

Replying to the charge that voters in the Fifth Precinct had their ballots prepared for them, or that they were assisted in the preparation of their ballots illegally, the respondent avers as follows:

"Here is the case of exhibit 'A': the respondent desires to call the attention of the court to the fact that in making up the list of voters to be taken C. Steele and Walter Sherst, the complainants have had recourse to a remarkable plan of enumerating as illegal voters, the name of every voter in said election appearing on the registration book, showing persons registered since January 1, 1894, with the exception of a few certain voters, whom the complainants thought voted for Peatross, and, therefore, omitted from said list."

The respondent denies that the names of the voters whose names appear on exhibit 'A' filed with the complaint, had their ballots prepared, or were aided in the preparation of the same otherwise than as the law permits, and the respondent further denies that the ballot of any other voter cast in said precinct was prepared otherwise than in accordance with law."

The reply concludes as follows: "And, now, answering the said complaint as a whole, in so far as it charges any conspiracy, coercion, intimidation, or other illegal or improper conduct on his part, this respondent denies utterly the said complaint."

"And this respondent challenges the persons filing said complaint, and particularly the persons who made up thereto, to produce one single election
